Minister Spotlight — Adam Davis

In ministry and daily life, we often find that our plans stretch beyond expected timelines. I recently spoke with Ty about his ministry frustrations, which reminded me of a vital piece of wisdom: What you hope to accomplish in a day will likely take a week; what you plan for a week could easily take a month; what you aim to do in a month might stretch into a year; and what you envision for a year could take three.

This conversation was a timely reminder that our calling is not a sprint but a marathon. As we gather together as a congregation, let's embrace this perspective. Let's support each other in steadfastness and encouragement, reminding ourselves and one another not to grow weary in doing good. In patience and perseverance, we forge meaningful change in our lives and our community.
